“Drip by Drip empowering children’s Lives

Our journey of creating a sustainable future of no Malawian child going to bed hungry, suffering from Malnutrition and every child having access to education is continuing, and we're already seeing the impact. The Kuchata Community offered us an old building to help implement our project, and we're excited to transform it into a place where children can thrive and learn.

We organized a village cleanup drive with the children, focusing on collecting discarded plastic bottles. Not only did this make the community cleaner, but it also served a dual purpose. We repurposed the plastic bottles for a drip irrigation system, providing a sustainable water source for newly planted tree seeds.

Nourishing Minds, Creating Malawi's Future

We are incredibly excited and grateful for the support from The Pollination Project for our Nourishing Minds Project. Their generous grant has helped us make a difference in children's lives by addressing malnutrition, poverty, and school dropouts in Malawi.

Phase 1: Bitter - Land and Minds preparedness

Our first set of lessons, called "Bitter: Land and Mind Preparedness," is off to a great start. Participants are learning about how agriculture and nutrition are connected and how taking care of the land is linked to their health.

Preparing the Land: We have been working hard to get the farmland ready. We've been clearing, tilling, and planting to create a fertile ground for our mission.

Selection on Beneficiaries: We've carefully selected community members who are eager to learn about sustainable development and make a positive impact in their community.

Balanced Diets: We're helping participants learn about the importance of balanced diets, including the value of fresh fruits and essential nutrients. Our aim is to promote healthier eating habits.

Environment: Our sessions also focus on the importance of taking care of the environment. Participants learn about how their actions affect the environment and ways to protect our planet.
